« Why a Universal Declaration of Humankind Rights ? The idea was to create a text acceptable to the 195 states of the United Nations while making real progress. This declaration has now emerged, and we look forward to its adoption. It is not a convention and will not be binding on the States that adopt it.

It is therefore a first step, as was the case thirty years ago with the Declaration of the Rights of the Child, which then gave rise to the Convention on the Rights of the Child twenty years later. Similarly, the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights is only a declaration, but it has permeated our law for half a century.

It is not a question of replacing the existing texts, but of building a complementary text setting out rights and duties that are no longer individual but collective. This declaration proposes in particular to create an interdependence between living species, to ensure their right to exist and the right of humanity to live in a healthy and ecologically sustainable environment.

The Universal Declaration of Humankind Rights could appear as a beautiful utopia : that of bringing together men and women but also entities of good will for their common future by accepting the definition of rights but above all of duties incumbent on present generations in relation to past generations and above all on future generations. It is becoming a reality. Cities, regions, supranational organizations have subscribed to the DHR like many bar associations, NGOs, and also companies and individuals. The Comoros movement at the state level is expanding and will only come to an end on the day when the United Nations organization has endorsed the declaration, thus allowing a text to be signed by states, public and private entities and individuals for the first time in history. »

October 20, 2017

Chère Madame Lepage,

I would like to take this opportunity to commend you for your invaluable time, service and work in preserving our environment, and also in further promoting, protecting, and elevating our most essential human rights issues.

There is no doubt that we, as a humanity, face an overarching question of global livelihood in times of drastic climate changes, and many unforeseen natural, political, economic, and societal phenomena.

Following the establishment of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1945, it is evident that there is a need for a renewed sense of establishing a framework that provides a comprehensive solution to the most pressing issues of our global livelihood.

In this aspect, I believe that the Declaration of Humankind Rights and Duties' initiatives outline very appropriate responses to continue carrying on the objectives originally founded 72 years ago. The Declaration of Humankind Rights and Duties' mission and plans will surely provide a common and comprehensive framework, in which it can be widely understood, accepted and applicable across nations, societies, businesses, communities, and peoples.

Hence, it is with my utmost enthusiasm that I would like to fully support the Declaration of Humankind Rights and Duties, as it is my hope that this will provide a framework for the international community to be involved in unison to provide a safer and a better future for all.

Sincerely Yours,

BAN Ki-moon
